Beyond HR:

Transcending Functional Boundaries

Beyond HR:

Transcending Functional Boundaries

In an economy founded on innovation and change, one of the premium challenges of organizations is to design more flexible organizations. Companies are replacing vertical hierarchies with horizontal networks; linking together traditional functions through inter-functional teams and forming strategic alliances with suppliers, vendors and even competitors. Managers are insisting that employees understand and adhere to the company's strategic mission without the distinction of title, function or task. For many professionals, a single metaphor has emerged to capture this conundrum of change i.e. 'corporation without boundaries'.

Organizations have been right in dismissing these rigid and unresponsive boundaries. The newer boundaries that exist today are more psychological than organizational. Instead of being reflected in a company's organizational structure, they are enacted repeatedly in a manager's relationship with superiors, peers and subordinates. As these boundaries are new and unconventional, they tend to be invisible to most managers. Hence knowing how to recognize these new boundaries and using them productively is the essence of management in any organization. In the backdrop of this transition; tasks, functions, designations and verticals are undergoing a massive change and human resources is no exception. The thrust today on the human resources function is to align their goals with the organization to ultimately enhance organizational effectiveness.

Hence what is the role of HR in building and engaging a virtual workplace? What is the role of HR in managing M&As? What is the role of HR analytics in enhancing the functional manoeuvrability of HR? What is the role of HR in restructuring organizations for new age business? The 8th National HR Conclave at KSOM tries to explore answers to few of the questions posed above through speeches and discussions with eminent HR & IR professionals from different industrial sectors in India.

KIIT School of Management (KSOM)

KIIT School of Management (KSOM) is a constituent unit of KIIT University, established under section 3 of the UGC Act, 1956. This is the 24th year of its existence. In several prestigious rankings such as Outlook, Careers360, Open-C Fore, BAUniverse.com, KSOM has been consistently ranked among the top B-Schools in India and as one of the finest in Eastern India. It has been rated in A Grade by National Accreditation and Assessment Council (NAAC). The school is a SAP University Alliances partner and also has tie-up with Dassault Systemes, a worldleader in Product Lifecycle Management solutions.

KIIT University, Bhubaneswar

With an impressive cluster of 28 academic campuses spread across 25 square kilometers, KIIT University today has the unique distinction of becoming the youngest educational institution in the country to be declared a University (U/S 3 of the UGC Act, 1956). Recently it has been conferred with category 'A' status by Ministry of HRD, Govt. of India. However, the jewel in the crown has been Kalinga Institute of Social Sciences (KISS), where more than 25,000 children from lesser-known tribes are being provided free boarding, lodging, education and vocational training. It is education coupled with empathy that makes KIIT stand out from the rest.

Kalinga Institute of Social Sciences (KISS)

KISS, Bhubaneswar, India is a fully free, fully residential home for 25308 poorest of the poor indigenous children who are provided holistic education from Kindergarten to Post Graduation along with lodging, boarding, health care facilities besides vocational, life skill empowerment. With a humble beginning in 1992-93 with only 125 students, it has now become World's largest residential institute for indigenous children. The Institute plans to educate 2,00,000 poor indigenous children over the next decade by setting up branches in 30 districts of Odisha and all the states of India.
